

The American Journal of Psychotherapy

Call for Papers From Early-Career Professionals

The American Journal of Psychotherapy welcomes submissions from early-career professionals to “The Trainee’s Perspective” section, edited by Lisa A. O’Donnell, Ph.D., L.M.S.W., and Paula Ravitz, M.D., F.R.C.P.C.

The Trainee’s Perspective

The community of mental health professionals has much to learn from the perspectives of trainees across disciplines who deliver psychotherapy to diverse populations. The editors welcome The Trainee’s Perspective articles from doctoral students, residents, fellows, interns, new practitioners, and others within the fields of psychiatry, psychology, social work, nursing, occupational therapy, and counseling who are pursuing creative and innovative ways to work with patients within these fields and have insightful reflections based on their experience. This column is intended to feature brief reflections on trainees’ experience of learning, conducting, implementing, and evaluating psychotherapy. Authors should incorporate a scholarly integration of related literature into their personal reflections.

Submission requirements

- up to 1,000 words
- 5 headings or fewer
- up to 10 references
- no abstract
- no tables or figures

Where to submit

Visit <https://psychotherapy.psychiatryonline.org> and select Submit an Article.

